

COACHING

Managing Coaching for Results and ROI

How a Systemised Approach to Coaching Can Help Organisations Get a Better Return on Their Investment When Coaching Is No Longer an “If” but a “How?”

The Ken Blanchard Companies® defines coaching as a deliberate process that uses focused conversations to create an environment for individual growth, purposeful action, and sustained improvement.

Coaching makes a difference in organisations because it addresses key business issues and lets people know what they should do more of or less of to achieve personal and organisational goals. It is a process of self-leadership that enables people to gain clarity about who they are, what they are doing, and why they are doing it. Coaching helps individuals set specific, measurable goals designed to help them achieve desired outcomes.

Most leading organisations have recognised the benefits of integrating coaching with their training and change initiatives. But large-scale deployments of coaching can be challenging. Blanchard® spent more than half a decade exploring what all the stakeholders involved in coaching initiatives need to make it work. We then developed a systematic approach to coaching that allows organisations to achieve a better return on investment as they gain the benefits of infusing coaching at multiple levels.

This paper highlights the business issues that coaching addresses, the benefits of coaching, and the improvements in effectiveness and efficiency that can be realised through the web-based Blanchard Coaching Management System.

Since 2000, Blanchard has successfully implemented coaching services in hundreds of organisations with thousands of individuals. Aggregated reports show that:

- Ninety-two percent of the participants are highly satisfied with their coaching experience.
- Ninety percent of the participants feel coaching was a good investment of personal time and organisational resources.
- Eighty-six percent of the participants believe the individuals and the organisation were benefiting significantly from the coaching.

What are the business issues that coaching addresses?

Employee Retention

Organisations say: Retaining high-quality people is an ongoing issue in our company, and every time we lose an employee, it costs us thousands of dollars. How can we reduce our turnover?

Coaching helps to lay the foundation for improving the relationship between managers and the people they support and depend on. It recognises the importance of clear agreements in all interactions and provides a context and a safe environment for a manager to discuss the specific challenges and opportunities that working with employees presents.

Leadership Bench Strength

Organisations ask: How do I develop strong, self-reliant leadership bench strength for the future?

Coaching provides a process for helping leaders deliver on their best intentions. It creates an environment in which leaders can discuss and practice new skills and behaviours. Coaching assists leaders in understanding how to leverage their unique gifts and gives them a forum in which to practice. Coaching causes leaders to mature, moving past problem solving to increasing their ability to manage paradoxical situations. Human Resources professionals learn to apply coaching concepts to short-term problem solving and long-term professional development.

Productivity

Organisations express concerns: How do we instill a sense of passion and accountability, and have our people generate consistent and outstanding results?

Coaching breeds passion and accountability: passion because the more people are recognised for their true talents, the more confident, committed, and competent they become; accountability because coaching asks people what stake they hold in the success or failure of any given project or task that requires their contribution.

Organisational Alignment

Organisations seek answers: How do we get everyone working toward the same corporate goal when they often have diverse personal styles and goals?

Coaching helps people understand how personal success is linked to organisational success.

Coaching compels people to focus on purposeful action, because they understand who they are, where they are going, and how their contribution impacts the company.

Learning Retention and ROI

Organisations seek solutions: How can retention and implementation be maximised so a return on investment is realised—sooner rather than later?

When learning anything new, time and practice are required in order to achieve proficiency. People and organisations need a systematic approach to learning that promotes sustainability and facilitates change. Coaching helps retain and reinforce learning in ways that can be measured as well as observed. Pre- and post-coaching assessments allow for detailed analysis of learning, achievements, and resulting change. Quantitative and qualitative information relative to organisational strengths, gaps, and trends helps gauge the return on investments and links those returns to specific business strategies.

Communication

Organisations want to know: How do we get people communicating effectively and productively about goals and expectations?

A coach provides support to managers on communication and productivity issues that arise. Coaching is a means of gaining clarity, focusing on organisational objectives as they relate to the manager being coached, and taking action.

Coaching supports and encourages healthy communication in all relationships. The specific communication skills that are addressed are listening to learn, asking questions to gain clarity and resolve ambiguity, testing for truth rather than making assumptions, and endorsing others for a job well done.

Morale

Organisations ask: How does coaching affect morale?

Coaching provides a safe place where individuals can talk about their challenges in a confidential environment, openly sharing their concerns, and gaining a different perspective to take back into the workplace. Often just having a safe, objective person to listen to concerns helps people feel better and thus raises morale, particularly in times of change.

What Are the Benefits of Coaching?

The personal benefits of coaching are as wide ranging as the individuals involved.

For example, it enhances people's behavioural knowledge and provides hands-on practice for new skills and approaches within a safe environment.

Numerous clients report that coaching had a positive impact on their careers as well as their lives by helping them to:

- Establish and take action toward achieving goals
- Become more self-reliant
- Contribute more effectively to the team and the organisation
- Enhance learning retention and reinforce and integrate new skills
- Take greater responsibility and accountability for actions and commitments
- Work more easily and productively with others (boss, direct reports, peers)
- Communicate more effectively
- Gain more job and life satisfaction

The Five Most Common Benefits Achieved by Blanchard Coaching Client Organisations

How Can Organisations Manage Coaching to Achieve Greater Effectiveness and Efficiency?

Coaching typically takes place through a one-to-one relationship between an individual and a coach, usually via telephone. However, when properly implemented, the coaching process involves stakeholders throughout an organisation.

These stakeholders include the Corporate Sponsor, the individual who is responsible for overseeing coaching on the organisational level; Clients, those receiving coaching; and Coaches, the certified professionals who provide the focus and path to achieving goals. Blanchard's management system addresses the needs of all these stakeholders.

The Blanchard Coaching Management System (CMS) is a proprietary web application that Blanchard Coaching uses to make coaching initiatives in organisations more effective and efficient. It provides benefits for all stakeholders in a coaching engagement.

The Corporate Sponsor

The CMS provides crucial information for the Corporate Sponsor who needs to keep a finger on the pulse of all the coaching, providing peace of mind that all coaches are using a consistent approach, methodology, and language. The CMS makes it quick and easy to communicate with all coaches, track announcements, and get immediate feedback from the coaches.

With the CMS, the Corporate Sponsor can easily track and report on

- Active coaches
- Active clients
- Coaching sessions (occurrence by date)
- Trends and themes as reported by coaches (while maintaining confidentiality)
- Focus areas (anonymous listing of what participants are working on)
- The extent to which corporate objectives are being met
- Goal and task completion of participants

The Client

The CMS provides the client with one-stop shopping: a place to take notes—record and track goals, action steps, and milestones—as well as schedule sessions with the coaches.

Prior to engaging with his or her coach, the client can work through a built-in self-assessment tool to help identify focus areas. Additionally, the system provides hundreds of tips and tools to increase effectiveness in management and leadership competencies.

The Coaches

Each coach is provided a comprehensive toolbox that enhances efficiency. The CMS provides coaches with

- An at-a-glance client list, session activity, notes, and all session records—a paperless coaching practice
- Automated, client-driven scheduling
- Hundreds of tools for JIT (just-in-time) learning with clients
- Immediate and easy storage of all coaching-related information

Without sacrificing confidentiality, the CMS provides a synopsis of what goes on in the coaching sessions, often providing valuable information that the organisation needs to create better working environments for its people.

The fact that all this information is readily available is what sets the Blanchard CMS apart from others—most other coaching companies are still using a limited database program.

Perhaps the best benefit of all is that the CMS helps leaders and managers stay attuned to employees' unique coaching needs. No matter how large the scope of a coaching initiative becomes, each client is motivated by a unique set of values, attitudes, skills, and goals. Great coaching must be based on a clear understanding of what those factors are. The CMS helps decision makers and coaches develop and deliver coaching at a personal, customised level.

Blanchard Coaching

The vision of Blanchard Coaching is to make coaching available to all organisations. This means that we are passionate about making coaching easy and affordable for corporate sponsors to provide it to the people who want it and need it. We have been guided by this vision since we started providing coaching services.

To be the best, we emphasise the following:

- Business results. We focus solely on business coaching to achieve results for the organisation that hires us. Our clients have conducted impact evaluations that demonstrate the results they have delivered with our support. (We do not provide either life coaching or career coaching following outplacement.)
- Organisational trend reporting. After each coaching session, the Blanchard coach is required to note the focus areas that were addressed, progress made, and any organisational issues or trends they may have heard in a threaded discussion that only the Blanchard coach team can see. This valuable tool is called the Passalong. The Senior Coach monitors the Passalong and reports notable findings to the Client Sponsor on a regular, agreed-upon basis. This information includes organisational barriers that may be getting in the way of many individuals in achieving results. This process occurs while preserving individual confidentiality, which is the bedrock of our coaching philosophy. Thus far, we are the only coaching firm that provides this useful service.

- Experience and expertise. We are pioneers in the coaching industry and have been providing worldwide large-scale coaching services for more than a decade. Our coaching experts have written several books on the subject, including Coaching in Organisations: Best Business Practices from The Ken Blanchard Companies; Coaching Essentials for Leaders; and Leverage Your Best, Ditch the Rest. They have also authored a number of articles that have appeared in reputable publications such as Harvard Management Update and T & D magazine. Additionally, they are frequently featured as headline speakers at coaching conferences around the world.
- Our infrastructure. The processes and technology we employ are proven to support large-scale coaching engagements (e.g., Senior Coach partnership with Client Sponsor, and our proprietary Coaching Management System).
- Our intellectual property. Our coaches use Blanchard's proprietary leadership models and tools, such as SLII®, when appropriate during the coaching process. This material is some of the most research-driven and rich leadership material available.
- Our coaches are held to a higher standard. Coach Certification from the International Coach Federation is a must, but it is not enough. Our coaches had to demonstrate their coaching skills as they progressed through a rigorous interview process that includes live telephone coaching sessions with the interviewer. In addition, our coaches are provided ongoing development of their skills and are regularly evaluated using key metrics to ensure effectiveness.
- Impact analysis. Initial assessments, impact mapping, and a thorough orientation process prepare organisations, individuals, and coaches for coaching initiatives, and enhance our ability to meet unique needs. Later, we follow up with detailed reports of the learning, achievements, and changes that result.
